FIU | Global Learning

Over the past seven years, FIU has built a solid foundation of global learning across the curriculum and co-curriculum. "Global learning is a High-Impact Practice, widely tested and shown to increase the success of students from all backgrounds. Global learning purposefully engages the diverse perspectives of our faculty, students, and interconnected local and global communities to analyze and address global issues."

This report presents an estimate of the extent to which global learning is provided by your department. The depth and breadth of global learning opportunities available is reflected in your department's "Go Global Score." The score is a weighted average composed of the performance indicators below.

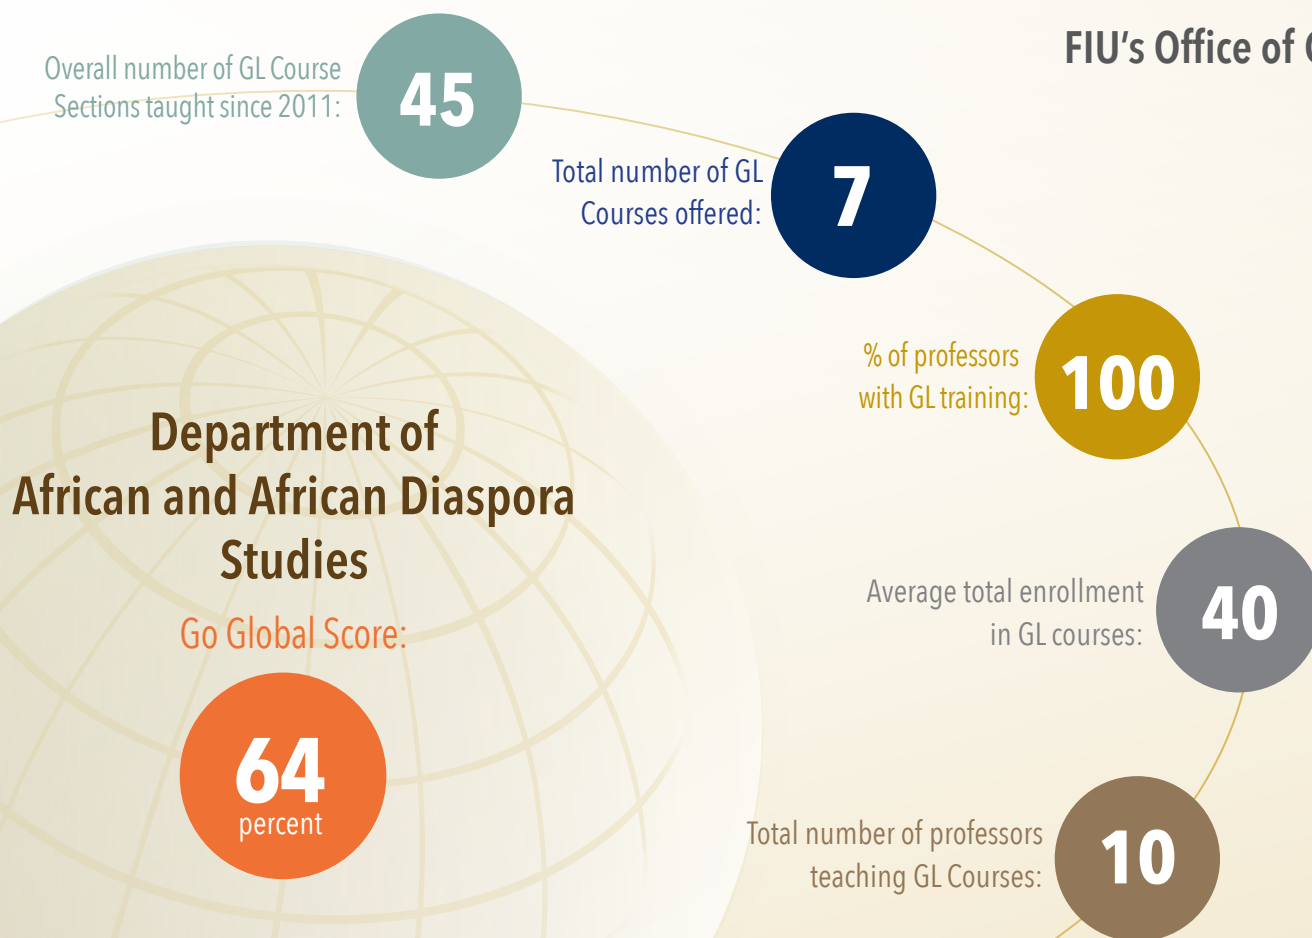

Through global learning, your department can effectively prepare students to collaboratively develop solutions to the world's most complex and pressing global problems.

Now is the perfect time to add global learning opportunities for your students and faculty.

Let's move the needle together.

FIU's Office of Global Learning Initiatives offers you:

- Targeted global learning course development and instruction workshops
- Globally-focused student internships, clubs, and programming
- Global learning faculty and student research fellowships
- Global learning graduation honors: the Excellence in Global Learning Medallion and Peace Corps Prep certification programs
- Options for global learning-designated minors and certificates
- Ways to publicize your faculty and students' global learning research, service, and teaching successes
